

GPO Recatalogs Publications Which Appeared in the Monthly Catalog And GPO Tape with Duplicate OCLC Numbers

From time to time, cataloging records appear in the Monthly Catalog, the GPO tape, and other tape and card services with duplicate OCLC control numbers. These result from GPO cataloger error.

Can records with duplicate record numbers be corrected?

No, once an OCLC database record is used by a cataloger to catalog a publication it is not possible to change the resulting record on the GPO tape to give it a different OCLC number.

Can the publications be recataloged so that each has its own OCLC number?

Yes, GPO has recataloged all recent publications that have been identified as having duplicate OCLC numbers. The new records have unique OCLC control numbers.

Libraries receiving the GPO tapes should delete the records with duplicate OCLC control numbers from their databases.

Libraries should notify us if they find other cases where more than one record has the same OCLC number. We will recatalog these publications. We have issued additional instructions to our catalogers to reduce the occurrence of this type of error.

Please contact Tad Downing, Chief, Cataloging Branch, if you find additional GPO records with duplicate OCLC numbers. He may be contacted by e-mail, fax, mail, or phone, as follows:

The publications that the GPO Cataloging Branch has recataloged to provide unique OCLC numbers are listed in the following table. As we become aware of similar errors, we will provide corrections in future issues of the Technical Supplement.

Codes are provided in each entry to indicate the action GPO has taken.

Key to Codes:

1. Recataloging was not required because the OCLC number in the printed Monthly Catalog and the MOCAT tapes is the same. (Other publications were incorrectly cataloged on the same database record.)
2. Recataloged for the GPO tape under a different OCLC number than the one listed in the printed Monthly Catalog because the record for another publication was used for cataloging.
3. Recataloged prior to the time the record appeared in the printed Monthly Catalog (but originally cataloged using the record for another publication).
